INDIAN AFFAIRS.

Situation Conceded to be Serious.

THE TROOPS ON THE MOVE.

Portion of the Indians Making for Big Horn Mountains.

Two Smooth Thieves Rob a
Brooklyn Bank.

Restless Redskins.

RUSHVILLE (Neb.), Nov. 20.—As soon as the troops arrived here yesterday couriers rushed with the news to Pine Ridge Agency. Word was received last night that the Indians under Red Cloud declare they will meet the troops in battle to-day. Agent Royer and his Indian police are powerless. One of the latter, Thunder Bear, arrested a bad Indian last Saturday, but was overpowered and the prisoner was released. Several other prisoners were released and the rebels threatened to burn the agency buildings. The Indians at Pine Ridge Agency are about equally divided among good and bad. Red Cloud and Little Wound have been fermenting trouble for several weeks, while American Horse and Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Horse tried to pacify the warriors. Last week a big meeting was held thirty miles from Pine Ridge Agency, at which it is reported an apostle of the Messiah was present. He told the Indians to return to the agency and await the coming of the Messiah, who is to arrive to-day in the form of a buffalo. He will give the signal for the opening of the conflict which is to annihilate the white race. This fact causes great fear in the minds of old Indian fighters. Unless there is absolute failure to get word from the Messiah on the day of the arrival of troops a conflict is certain. Major Butler's column went into camp prepared for what now seems to be a certain combat. Many of the friendly Indians have left the agency and are now camped at Rushville. They have signified their intention of aiding the whites.

OMAHA, Nov. 21.—A special to the Bee from Pine Ridge reports that affairs are temporarily quiet, though there is intense uneasiness. General Brooke is anxiously waiting for instructions from the Department at Washington, due before he left Omaha, as to whether or not he shall interfere with the ghost dance. This dance is now going on at Wounded Knee, sixteen miles northeast, at Porcupine, thirty miles north, while a scout who has just come in, reports that a band of 500 copper faces appeared at a point only nine miles northeast.

The Indians are dancing with their rifles strapped upon their backs. The ones dancing at Wounded Knee announce openly that if the soldiers attempt to take Little Wound Jack, Red Cloud, son of old Red Cloud; Big Road and Little Road away, as there have been threats of doing, they will cut off the soldiers' ears and otherwise maim them.

Every officer on the ground, especially those high in authority, look upon the situation as very critical. To be still more explicit, the officers consider it next to probable that six or eight thousand Indians may sweep down on the agency at any moment.

"Nothing but a miracle could save us from Custer's fate," said a prominent officer, "and I hope to God reinforcements will arrive before the red devils make their break."

The Indians here in sight seem exceedingly friendly and are trusted by all, but is well to keep in view the fact that blood is thicker than water. Red Cloud, who has been and is still sympathizing with the new Christ fanatics, is here instead of being off at the ghost dance, and continues very sullen. He is being keenly watched, and on the first false move he will be put in irons. He seems thoroughly bent on producing an uprising.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The telegrams received at the War Department from General Miles regarding the Indians are to the same tenor as contained in the dispatches covering talks with him at Chicago last night. He considers the situation so grave that he recommends the putting of additional troops into the field at once. The cavalry and artillery at Fort Riley are ordered to be in readiness to move at once.

CHEYENNE, Nov. 21.—Frank Guard, a Government scout stationed at Fort McKinley, reports the renegade Sioux and Cheyennes heading for Utah and the Big Horn mountains. The distance is 200 miles, and the fleeing reds will traverse several counties of Wyoming. Their plan is doubtless to make a stand against their pursuers in the broken country. Governor Warren at once wired General Brooke to protest against the removal of the Fort McKinley cavalry to Pine Ridge. Guard intimates there is imminent peril. His information was secured from Utah Crows, to whom runners brought the news.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—General Miles has advised that there is no outbreak at Pine Ridge, and thinks General Brooke will prevent hostilities.

Diplomatic Positions.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—This morning's Post says there are several diplomatic and consular positions of higher grades yet filled by Democrats, also several Postmasters in large cities, particularly in the South. Rumor is busy with the name of Congressman Adams of Chicago for Minister to China; vice, Denby an Indiana Democrat, whom the President has not recalled because of his personal friendship. Denby is said to be perfectly willing to come home and Congressmen Hitt, whose influence with Blaine is said to be all powerful, is urged, it is said, that Adams succeed him. It is also said that Charles Emery Smith is anxious to return to his Philadelphia paper, having already tired of the rigors of St. Petersburg. If he should resign, Governor Gear of Iowa or Bayne of Pennsylvania will likely succeed him. Another of the defeated will be sent to Central America to relieve Mizner, his recall having been practically agreed upon. Morrow of California could have that place if he wanted it, and he will probably take it, for the salary is $10,000 and the expense of living is not great.

Report Which Should be Heeded.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Surgeon-General Hamilton has made a report to Secretary Tracy giving the result of visits by him to the principal foreign ports of the embarkment of immigrants for the United States. He visited Naples, London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Bremen, Trieste and Hamburg, and found no thorough medical examination of emigrants anywhere. Dr. Hamilton says no country is so free as the United States in admitting immigrants, and urges restrictive legislation, pointing out that nearly 2,700,000 immigrants have come here within six years, largely made up of undesirable classes. He recommends that a law be passed requiring the intended immigrants to furnish the United States Consuls with evidence that he is not a criminal or a pauper, nor suffering from any epidemic or contagious disease or other disability to make him a public charge.

Indicted for Manslaughter.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—The Grand Jury has returned twenty-five indictments against J. C. Bright, President, and W. H. Bright, Vice-President, of the Genesee Oil Company of Buffalo, who shipped the naphtha which caused an explosion on the steamer Toga here some months ago, killing twenty-five longshoremen.

A Fraud Arrested.

SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.
ODEN (Utah), Nov. 21.—Inspector Lawrence caused the indictment and arrest to-day of Wm. Oscar Trailkill, conducting the alleged fraudulent, National Endowment Association. Trailkill is known in San Francisco. He was held under bonds.

Will Pay as Far as Possible.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The Citizens' Savings Bank continued in full force to-day. The Directors met this morning and decided not to take advantage of the ninety days' notice rule, but to pay the depositors as far as possible.

A Smooth Bank Robbery.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The twenty-sixth ward bank of Brooklyn was robbed yesterday of $5,000 by a pair of clever thieves, who succeeded in diverting the cashier's attention.

McKenna's Plurality.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—Complete official returns from the Third Congressional District give McKenna (Rep.) 20,834, Irish (Dem.) 15,977; McKenna's plurality, 4,857.

"A Long-Felt Want."

An illuminated tin cat to scare away mice is a feature of the patent office. If a device could be patented whereby every cat which sings on backyard fence at night could be illuminated, it would fill a long-felt want, as it would enable the angry householder to see where to throw the boot-jack.

Peanut Social.

The young ladies of the Y. W. C. T. U. gave a very pleasant peanut social at Odd Fellows' Hall, on Wednesday evening. The program was unique and the peanuts were par excellence. A very enjoyable evening was spent by all.

RAILROAD MATTERS.

Union Pacific Management to Change.

ANOTHER BANK GOES UNDER.

Indictment of the New Orleans Assassins.

California Fruit Growers in Convention.

Overland Lines and Rates.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Gould was asked this morning in reference to the report that he had got control of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, and said the report was erroneous, although he admitted that he owned a considerable portion of the Atchison stock. He said the Missouri Pacific and the Atchison had entered into an agreement with reference to the future business policy of the two roads, and they had agreed that neither shall build any competing road into the territory of the other without a full understanding and sanction of the other.

With reference to the rates on the transcontinental lines, Gould expressed confidence that an agreement between the Presidents will be renewed and strictly maintained within a short time. Under the new situation nearly all the roads favor a restoration of rates. It only remains for the bankers to call the Presidents together.

It is authoritatively learned to-day that a meeting of the principal stockholders of the Union Pacific for a reorganization of its Board of Directors will be held next week. It is understood that Charles Francis Adams will retire and be succeeded by Sidney Dillon. The new Board of Directors will include Russell Sage, Jay Gould, Alexander E. Orr and Henry R. Hyde. The new board intends to appoint some young active railroad man as Vice-President and General Manager, whose headquarters will be in Omaha. The person to be so treated is not yet determined upon, but an endeavor will be made to secure a young man of abundant railway experience and the highest capability.

The Vanderbilt people admit that Jay Gould has got control of the Union Pacific.

One of the parties named as a director said: "The board will soon be reorganized. John D. Rockefeller working with Gould brought the change about. He refused to speak about the future policy of the road in regard to the Northwest traffic agreement."

Gould this afternoon said to a reporter: "I know nothing as to whether Adams has placed his resignation in the hands of Ames. Adams and Ames visited me yesterday, and the former expressed a strong desire to be relieved from the office of President. He suggested that he resign, and a meeting of stockholders for action upon his resignation be called for next week. I presume if it is true he has entrusted his resignation to Ames a meeting will be held. It is likely, also, that the vacancy in the management will be filled. Dillon has been mentioned as the successor of Adams. It is probable, should Dillon be chosen, there will be elected along with him a Vice-President, who shall act as General Manager, with headquarters at Omaha."

Gould added that such a move would make the relations of his interests and the Union Pacific closer.

Boston, Nov. 21.—President Adams, Director Ames and other directors all decline to say anything about the report of a proposed transfer of the Union Pacific to Jay Gould's interests.

Farmers Alliance.

SAN JOSE (Cal.), Nov. 21.—The Farmers Alliance spent the morning in discussing their constitution and by-laws, section by section. A proposition to fix San Francisco as the permanent place for the annual meeting was voted down. The question whether the organization be extended to incorporated cities and whether wage-workers not directly interested in farming are to be admitted will be up for discussion this afternoon.

The proceedings were secret and the constitution will not be accessible until it is finally adopted.

Bank Failure.

GUTHRIE (Oklahoma), Nov. 21.—The Commercial Bank, the largest in the Territory, has failed. The assets and liabilities are unknown.

A Railroad Alliance.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—It is stated this afternoon that an alliance has been formed between the interests represented by George C. Magoun of Kidder, Peabody & Co., Jay Gould, C. P. Huntington and the Standard Oil Company, by which all railroads owned or controlled by them, individually or jointly, are to be operated together, practically under Gould's direction. The alliance includes the Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Northern Pacific, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, Texas Pacific and many other roads.

It is also said Gould is trying to force the holders of Rock Island to either sell their stock around the present prices or join hands with the other roads in the alliance.

The Burlington and Chicago & Alton will act with the allied roads in whatever step may hereafter be taken, but there are fears the Vanderbilts may be angry at the loss of their traffic contract on the Union Pacific and refuse to join.

If the Vanderbilts and the roads controlled by J. P. Morgan can be brought in, a meeting of the bankers and railroad Presidents of all roads in the country will be called, a new association formed, and then an immediate material advance in all railroad rates will at once be ordered.

Likely to Change Hands.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The World says: The greatest piece of news in Wall street is that John D. and William Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnates, had acquired control of the Northern Pacific Railroad. They are known to have been heavy buyers of Northern Pacific preferred during the late decline in values. They bought in Northern Pacific at the request of Jay Gould. They have a great amount of surplus money, for which they have been seeking advantageous investments.

The earnings of the Northern Pacific are now the largest in the history of the company. The company, however, has been suffering from entanglement with other Villard corporations, and the purpose of the Rockefeller is stated to be to remove it from them.

There is a scheme on foot to provide connections for the Northern Pacific which will make it an uninterrupted rail line from the Atlantic to the Pacific. By its alliance with the Wisconsin Central it already reaches from Puget Sound to Chicago, and its route thence, it is said, will be by way of the Baltimore & Ohio.

California Fruit-growers.

SANTA CRUZ (Cal.), Nov. 21.—At the Fruit-growers' Convention this morning a committee of five was appointed to confer with a similar committee from the Florida Fruit Union in reference to an alliance or co-operation between the two organizations.

A special committee reported in favor of some action by the fruit-growers of the State to protect Eastern dealers and consumers against imposition and fraud by unprincipled parties selling inferior fruit under California labels.

An essay on grapes was read by W. H. Galbraith, and a discussion upon small fruits by Mrs. McCann occupied the balance of the session.

No Action Taken.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 21.—When the National Convention of Non-Partisan W. C. T. U. reassembled this morning a telegram from Miss Frances Willard was read, asking that the name of the organization be changed, as it was not legal.

The Executive Committee considered the telegram and decided that, as it was not officially addressed to the President, and as the Association could not change its name for a year anyhow, no action be taken.

Dissatisfied with the Trust.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Klatz and Fitzpatrick, bakers, and members of the American Biscuit Trust, are dissatisfied with its workings and have begun suit to get out of it. The alleged combination is in violation of the laws of the United States, being in restraint of trade.

A Liberal Order.

SPRINGFIELD (Ill.), Nov. 21.—The National Farmers' Alliance adjourned after adopting a constitutional amendment allowing all persons over 18 years of age, male and female, to join the order.

Indicted for Murder.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21.—The Grand Jury has indicted the seventeen Italians under arrest for the murder of Chief of Police Hennessy.

The Run Still Continues.

NEWARK (N. J.), Nov. 21.—The run on the Howard Savings Bank continues, but is not as heavy as yesterday.

The Stock Market.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Stocks are quiet and steady, with a fractional advance, generally in Americans.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Stocks opened comparatively quiet for the first hour, with prices higher. Advances were general for sugar refineries. The only marked feature in the early trading was a renewal of weakness in Rock Island, which opened up at 64½, but quickly fell to 61½ on large dealings. The general list yielded in small fractions, but the downward movement in Rock Island ended in material gains being scored all along the line.

At 11 o'clock the market was firm and active at the best prices reached.

Under some buying by London the market continued strong and was made more so by the announcement that the Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Union Pacific and others of the transcontinental roads had signed an agreement to firmly maintain rates and pay no rebates, and refuse to exchange traffic with the roads east of the Missouri river if found manipulating rates.

Pullman advanced 9, but the most conspicuous feature of the forenoon, however, was the activity and advance in Northern Pacific preferred, which went up 2½ to 63 before 11:30. After this came Union Pacific and Western Union.

Sugar refineries, on very light trading, rose from 52½ to 55½.

Less animation was shown later and the upward movement halted somewhat, but at noon the market was active at about the highest prices.

All active stocks showed marked strength. There was the usual reaction towards 2 o'clock, but no weakness, and at 2:15 the market was still active and strong at about the highest of the day.

At 3 o'clock money closed easy at 3 per cent. Stocks continued active after 2:15 and further gains were recorded although no marked movement, and prices again receded slightly toward the close, but sugar declined 1. The market closed active and strong at about the best prices of the day.

A Solvent Firm.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—Barker Bros. & Co.'s banking house was open this morning, although no business was done, and no statement of the firm's condition is yet made. It is asserted, however, that an investigation of the company, of which Wharton Barker is one of the Directors, shows it to be perfectly solvent.

Arrest of a Smuggler.

EL PASO, (Texas), Nov. 21.—Fonda, a wealthy banker of Chihuahua, Mexico, has been arrested at Paso Del Norte for smuggling silks into Mexico from the United States.

RESTORED HER HEALTH.
For 25 years I suffered from boils, erysipelas and other blood affections, taking during that time great quantities of different medicines without giving me any perceptible relief. Friends induced me to try S. S. S. It improved me from the start, and after taking several bottles, restored my health as far as I could hope for at 27 age, which is now seventy-five years.

How England Has Grown Rich.

Dr. William Anderson, the director-general of the British ordnance factories, recently stated that the Government manufactures at Woolwich, &c., had employed 17,000 people, paying £1,300,000 for wages and £1,015,000 for material, the latter sum, as he pointed out, largely representing wages also. He added: "With the exception of a very few stores, such as sulphur, saltpeter and gun stocks, all material has been purchased in the United Kingdom or its dependencies."

No nation understands more thoroughly than England that an article costs a country what it parts with to acquire it. And although all the world is called on to grow raw material for them to manufacture, excepting a very few stores, everything is bought in the United Kingdom or its dependencies.

When Gordon was cooped up in Khartoum the English Government bought some Worthington pumps, as no English pumps were made that could do the duty required. This was objected to, one paper voicing the public opinion in the exclamation: "We should like to know why the contract was let to an American at all, and why a single penny of the money paid by the British taxpayer should be sent out of this country? Warfare will assume a totally different aspect if British taxes are to be employed to enrich the rival manufacturers of other countries."

This feeling was so general that the pumps, though paid for, were not used; the advance over the desert from Suakin to Berber was given up for an expedition up the Nile, where the Arabs repulsed Woolsey mainly because the Ordnance Department preferred soldered cartridge shells made from copper purchased in the United Kingdom or its dependencies to solid drawn shells made from our lake copper.

Though they wish us to buy everything from them, they are not willing that British money should be expended to enrich the rival manufacturers of other nations. But when we propose to do our own work the claim that the desire to employ our own labor and increase the home market for farm produce is inspired by hostility.

The economic changes now being discussed in Nevada are of the greatest moment to our people. They mean tearing down the old foundation upon which we have built and putting under new timber. The work of reconstruction must be well and faithfully performed, or our form of government will be undermined and the structure will collapse. To do the work in the most substantial manner and lop off all unnecessary limbs that now incumber our State will require much careful thought, for we must make an organic law that will not only suit our present condition, but one that we can live under if our population should increase ten fold. It is no easy matter to tear away the foundation of an old structure, raise the building to a level with present requirements and put under it a new one that will be lasting. Such a move requires careful thought and intelligent action. The Legislature has much important preliminary work to do; work that will go far towards making our new constitution a success if properly done, but it requires intelligence and honesty that has not characterized Nevada Legislatures in past years, when its members were selected to perform a specific act and be governed the rest of the session by what corporation lobbyists told them to do. But we believe this year the State has representatives of a high order of intelligence and an honesty of purpose. It is to be expected that there will be some whose conscience will be susceptible to the almighty dollar, and aside from "making" money they will not care a whit about the State or its future, but we believe that class of individuals will be hopelessly in the minority, and powerless to cripple needed legislation. Everything depends upon the incoming Legislature, the men who are chosen to go to the Constitutional Convention, and the Legislature immediately following the Convention, for a wise and judicious carrying out of the will of the people. That a fundamental law can be framed that will better suit our requirements there can be no doubt, so let us go about it with a fixed and steady purpose to perform the work well.

It is clear to our mind that the State has got to partially prove its possibilities in an agricultural way before we can hope for outside capital. It has got to reclaim at least a portion of its vast territory by its own exertion, and the sooner the State realizes that fact and goes about it, the sooner we shall get assistance from the outside and develop into a State. We have nearly exhausted our borrowing capacity without bringing us any adequate return, either in the way of inviting foreign capital or bettering our condition. If we "borrow" any more let us do so to some purpose, and spend the money where the people can reap a little benefit. Let us prove to the world that we have land and climate unsurpassed in any country on earth that is susceptible of reclamation, and it will not be many days before we shall have all the money we want to make our desert wastes productive, and settle the State with an industrious, happy people.

THEIR GRANDFATHERS.

How Quickly the Blood of Gotham's Aristocracy Became Blue.

Recently a Brooklynite was sitting on the piazza of the biggest of the Hudson river hotels, not so many miles from West Point, says the Brooklyn Eagle. The Brooklynite was the descendant of a very old New York family which had transferred its lares and penates to this city early in the century. Stopping at the big hotel were members of the families of the Rhinelanders, the Gallatins, the Stewarts, the Gerrys, the Stuyvesants, the DePuysters, the Clintons, and several others of the best-known names in New York. A group was formed of a half dozen of the New York blue bloods and the Brooklynite. One of the party spoke of a literary treasure, if it might be so called, which he had a few days before picked up in an old book-stall down-town. The treasure was a directory of New York City printed a hundred years ago. The party were at once interested and the directory was produced.

"Now," said a member of the group, "let us try an experiment. Each one of us will write the name of his grandfather on a slip of paper, hand it to one person, and then we will see if the names so collected appear in the directory." The proposition was received with great favor. The papers were distributed and the returns handed in. Then amid much merriment the hunt for the grandfathers began. The first name, now borne by the most distinguished family in Gotham, had opposite it the business of "butcher."

"Yes," said the fifteen or twenty times a millionaire who bore his grandfather's cognomen, "my grandfather sold meat to your grandfathers."

The second name unearthed proved to be a shoemaker.

"And my grandfather," said this worthy's descendant, "made your grandfather's shoes."

So it went round. All those names which could be found had the imprint of some useful trade after them. The Brooklynite's grandfather was dignified beyond all the rest by the respectable appellation of "merchant."

This is a positive fact, and there was not one of these descendants of butchers, bakers and candlestick-makers but is in the inner circle of New York's four hundred and worth as many millions as he has fingers and toes.

It is no discredit, indeed, that such should be the fact. The country was new a century and odd years ago and New York was not so very much more than a village. But it is strange how quickly the blood of aristocracy gets so very, very blue.

LOMBARDY'S IRON CROWN.

A Royal Ornament Over Fifteen Hundred Years Old.

When Napoleon I. was crowned King of Italy at Milan, in 1805, he placed the iron crown of the Kings of Lombardy upon his head with his own hands, exclaiming: "Dieu me l'a donne, gare a qui la touche!" ("God has given it to me, beware who touches it!") This, according to tradition, was the metal attached to the crown by its ancient owners.

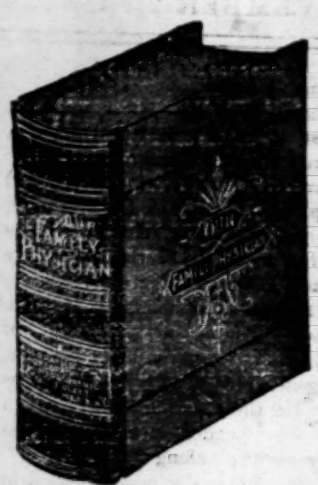

The crown takes its name from the narrow iron band within it, which is about three-eighths of an inch broad and one-tenth of an inch in thickness. Tradition says it was made of one of the nails used at the crucifixion of Jesus, and was given to Constantine by his mother, Helena, the discoverer of the cross, to protect him in battle. Afterwards it was used at the coronations of the Lombard kings, primarily at that of Agilulfus, at Milan, in the year 591. The crown is now kept in the Cathedral of Monza. The outer circuit is composed of six equal pieces of beaten gold, joined together by hinges, and set with large rubies, emeralds and sapphires on a ground of blue gold enamel. Within the circuit is the iron said to have no speck of rust upon it, although it has been exposed for over 1,500 years.—Jewelers' Weekly.

—The nation which most interests many politicians is the nomination.

—The various schools under the patronage of the American Baptist Home Mission Society are generally in a healthy and promising condition. Dr. Morehouse gives very interesting details in the Home Mission Monthly, from his recent visit South, concerning Shaw University, Benedict Institute, the Atlanta Seminary, Leland University, Bishop College and other institutions.

OUR COLUMN.

These Are the Books

We Are Giving Away.

This book contains 480 pages; is eight and one-half inches long, six inches wide and two inches thick. It is printed on extra heavy paper and is handsomely bound, with embossed cover and gilt-lettered back.

It is different from all other works ever published. First—It teaches those who have it how to tell what the matter is when a person gets sick.

All similar books tell what to do if you know what the disease is. This book tells you HOW TO DETECT THE DISEASE, and then what to do for it.

No other Book Published does this.

Second—When a person is really attacked by a dangerous disease, it enables you to know the fact, and in such cases its advice is: "Send for a competent physician at once." But in all ordinary cases, such as can be easily cured, it gives full directions for treatment.

Third—It is not confined to the practice used by any one class of physicians; but it gives, separately, and for each disease, the methods used by each of the different schools of medicine, and in ALL CASES THE PRESCRIPTIONS ARE MADE BY THE MOST EMINENT MEN in their respective modes of practice. This makes the work specially suited to the needs of every family, no matter what medical school they prefer.

No other Book Published does this.

TESTIMONIALS:

I have examined the advance sheets of "Our Family Physician." It gives me pleasure to recommend the work as correct in its mode of treatment of disease, and it deserves wide circulation.

J. F. COOK, M. D., Professor in Burnett's Medical College, Chicago.

After examining the publication "Our Family Physician," I fully endorse the opinions expressed of its merits by the above gentlemen. R. H. SUNN, M. D., Professor of the Burnett Medical College.

The book contains a valuable chapter of symptoms, which will aid wonderfully in diagnosing diseases, and the proper remedies are given for Allopathic, Homoeopathic, Eclectic, Hydropathic and Boreal treatments.

We have a number of the books on hand, and we invite inspection. There are three chapters in the "Family Physician" which are worthy of special mention, namely, those on "Diseases of Women," "Diseases of Infants" and "Care of the Sick."

The first of these is a model of its kind. It is chaste in language, contains no disgusting pictures for children to happen on and is over-curious about, and taken altogether is the most practical, sensible and straightforward treatise upon this delicate subject that has ever been printed.

This chapter alone is worth many times the cost of the book to every mother, even if it had to be purchased at its regular price. The other chapters referred to are equally well written and valuable. See "Our Plan" on 4th page.

It is customary with newspapers to give premiums to new subscribers only; but the publishers of the WEEKLY GAZETTE mean to revise this old rule; they intend to do as well, at least, by their old subscribers—those who have stood by the paper in years past, and paid their money for it "right straight along." We propose to show our appreciation of these friends in a substantial manner; and as the premium to be offered is expensive, and as our express object in offering it is to increase our list of subscribers, we will ask every old subscriber who may renew his subscription, thus receiving the valuable premium, to constitute himself a missionary, and thus in securing at least ONE new subscriber. Come, and bring us one new name and get a book last will be of incalculable value to you.

—The new subscriber also gets a book.

If the book is to be sent out of this office, 20 cents must accompany order to pay postage.

THE MINT.

The Charges Made That the Officials Were in Collision With the Mining Companies Go Up in Smoke.

Director Leach of the Mint Service has investigated the charges made in the San Francisco Examiner a few months ago that the officials of the Carson Mint were in collusion with the Mill and Mining Company to defraud the stockholders in the Hale & Norcross and other mines. That official states that, at the request of certain stockholders of Comstock mines, he sent an impartial man to Carson, instructing him to confer with the attorney of the stockholders and get any points he could, and investigate the charges that the officials of the Carson Mint were in collusion with the Comstock mill ring.

"The gentleman reported," he said, "after a full and thorough investigation, that there was not the slightest evidence of any collusion or improperity upon the part of the Carson Mint officials, and that not one of the persons to whom the attorney referred him could or would state a single circumstance showing any impropriety on the part of the Mint officers."

Moreover, the Director of the Mint writes that he has not only given the stockholder an abstract of every deposit of bullion, name of depositor, etc., but he has instructed the Superintendent of the Carson Mint to afford them free access to the original books and papers of the Mint, and to afford them every facility for tracing the deposits.

INQUISITIVE EMIGRANT.

One of the Kind of "He Who Musts May Read."

While the west-bound overland train was waiting at the depot last evening for the change of express and baggage an inquiring emigrant asked a Gazette reporter what the resources were of the country surrounding Reno. He was told that the world-famed Comstock mines were almost in sight of Reno, furnishing a market for the farm products of the rich agricultural section surrounding the town; that Truckee meadows produced immense crops of alfalfa, which was fed to the thousands of beef cattle with which we supplied the San Francisco market; that large quantities of wool were shipped from here; that Reno was the distributing point for a large section north, south and east of us, and

"Well, yes, yes so," said the emigrant; "but what manufacturing industries have you?"

The reporter answered rapidly, for the train was starting: "Oh! we have a large flour mill and—"

"Yes, yes, I know," said the emigrant, "but have you any real live, rustling enterprise?" as he grasped the hand rail and swung onto the car steps.

"Yes, certainly," said the reporter, "the Reno Evening Gazette," which started for the city so that he lost his hat, and he looked dazed as the train whirled out of sight.

GIANT CAP ACCIDENT.

A Miner Wounded by an Accidental Explosion.

The Bodie Miner says: Last Tuesday, while working in one of his mines on Mount Gibbs, near Lundy, Paul Rouze, a well-known miner, met with an accident by the explosion of a blasting cap. He had the cap in his hand, and was cleaning out the sawdust with a little piece of sagebrush, when suddenly there was a bright flash before him, and he knew it had exploded. Looking at his left hand, in which he held the cap, he noticed that it was bleeding profusely, and, upon examination, found that the thumb had been blown off near the first joint. The right eye was also slightly injured. The patient was brought to town Wednesday evening, and, under the doctor's skillful treatment, he will escape with no further injury than the inconvenience of having to work with a short thumb and finger.

Turkeys and Chickens from Dakota.

Two cars passed west this morning loaded with chickens and turkeys from Dakota and bound for San Francisco. They were a fine lot of fowls, but the local dealers failed to get any because of the high prices, chickens being held at $8 per dozen and turkeys at $1.50 each.

THE INDIAN EXCITEMENT.

The Fort Douglas Troops Ordered Under Arms.

The Salt Lake Tribune of the 19th inst. says: Orders were received at Fort Douglas yesterday from the War Department at Washington, ordering under arms the entire garrison, excepting one company, and to be ready at a moment's notice for transportation to North Dakota, where the Redskins are making themselves so ultra numerous. The company to remain and guard the fort was selected by lot, and Company B, Sixteenth Infantry, Captain Palmer, drew the coveted slip of paper. The other five companies of the Sixteenth and the four companies of the Twenty-first infantry, prepared immediately to move; drew their rifles and packed up and were ready to bury their bayonets in the hide of the bumptious Redskins—provided they could reach them. But up to a late hour last night no orders to move on the enemy's scalps had been received, and the ceiling at the fort is uncertain. Major Parke will command the battalion of the Sixteenth and Major Anderson the battalion of the Twenty-first infantry.

General Connor, in speaking of the order last evening, held that cavalry was the proper arm of the science to operate against the Indians, not the infantry. The genus homo species redskin has the infamy of being a coward, calling him a coward soldier. And, moreover, unmounted infantry away from a railroad are not effective, as are cavalry. However, General Connor thinks that massing troops in the vicinity of the threat and outbreak will overawe the Indians.

Death of M. O'Farrell.

Many residents of Reno will be pained to hear of the recent death in Iowa of M. O'Farrell, who left Reno a few months since in the hope that his health, which had been greatly impaired by lagrippe, might be improved by a change of climate. Deceased will be remembered as the man who for some time had charge of the Reno Gas Company's business.

A DOCTOR'S REBUKE.

Immensely More Mischievous than Generally Suspected.

Dr. King, the eminent medical writer, in a learned dissertation on our national complaint, constipation, says:

The great quantity of cathartic pills, etc., which are taken by the people of this country are productive of immensely more mischief than is generally suspected. True, the physic unloads the bowels, but its action tends to diminish the tone of the intestines; so that, instead of removing evilness, it aggravates it, leaving the bowels in a more torpid condition.

Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla was designed to fill just such a contingency as the doctor's arraignment anticipates, viz: instead of being a powerful mineral purgative, it is a mild vegetable laxative, that, owing to its solvent and gentle stimulating properties, is so certain a relief in constipation that it has been given away to hundreds, not to be paid for unless it was of positive benefit. It replaces constipation almost immediately with a natural easy habit, and is so mild that, unlike drastic purgatives, it can be taken indefinitely with perfect safety.

Why cough and suffer with a cold, when Fryer's Astringent will give immediate relief. It contains no opium. Price 75 cents.

THE SPECTRAL VISITOR.

Mrs. Clare Gets the Better of a Designing Female.

"If you could give her any employment, Mrs. Clare, it would be a real act of Christian charity," said good old Mr. Owens. Mrs. Clare looked doubtful. She had come down into the country, with her heart full of peace and good-will toward men—and women, into the bargain. She had not much money to give—she had come to Middle Marshes to economize. That was the secret of her taking the lonely cottage on the edge of the hemlock copse, where the wind sighed so funnily of an evening, and the red reflections of the spring sunsets bled to turn the low-lying pools to blood. She was the wife of a sea captain, whose biennial voyages to China and Japan seemed like lifetimes; and she had a small income, and four little children to bring up. But work—that was, perhaps, within her power to bestow; and yet she hesitated, as Mr. Owens spoke.

"But she is such a peculiar looking person," said Mrs. Clare. "Do you notice she never lifts her eyes to one's face? And such strange eyes, too—full of greenish lights, like a cat's. And, then, her hair is so colorless and dry, exactly like the faded grass along the edge of the marsh; and there is such a peculiar, disfiguring scar upon her cheek."

Mr. Owens laughed a fat, oily, comfortable laugh.

"But, my dear madam," said he, "how very illogical that is. After all, we are none of us responsible for our looks. And they tell me she is an excellent seamstress. And, more than this, she has had a disappointment."

"A disappointment?" said Mrs. Clare. "You wouldn't think it, would you?" said Mr. Owens.

"Yes; she was engaged to a young carpenter of the neighborhood. But work was slack, and the carpenter didn't see his way clear to matrimony. So he has gone to the next seaport town to work at ship-building, and Mary Moore is left to wear the willow."

"Poor thing!" said Mrs. Clare; and she resolved to conquer her prejudices at once. Mary Moore was summoned to Ivy Lodge and set to work, and profuse were her expressions of gratitude.

"I hope you like the cottage, ma'am," said Mary, one day, as she sat at her work in the bay window.

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Clare, earnestly. "You don't find it lonely, eh, ma'am?"

Mrs. Clare shivered slightly. "A little," she acknowledged. "Toward evening, sometimes."

"Ah! said Mary Moore, biting off her thread. "I thought so. I knew all about the house. I lived here, ma'am, ten years, as maid to Mrs. Hodges, who owns the place. She couldn't stand it, ma'am, so she's gone to Florida."

"Couldn't stand what?" asked Mrs. Clare, with some curiosity.

"The sights, ma'am," said Mary, lowering her voice mysteriously. "And the sounds."

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Clare. "Ah, ma'am, that's what a many has said before you," said Mary. "Seven families have lived here since my old mistress went to Florida, and not one of 'em has stayed over the three months. All because of—"

"Of what?" said Mrs. Clare, as the woman paused.

"Of the ghost, ma'am. If you will have it," answered Mary Moore.

Mrs. Clare burst out laughing. "I never heard any thing so ridiculous in all my life," said she. "Do, pray, take a little more pains with those button-holes, Mary, and let the ghost alone; and I'll wager that it will not trouble us."

Mary sewed away in silence, with the greenish eyes fixed intently on her work, and the thin lips tightly compressed. She had scattered the seed; it was only to wait, now, for it to germinate.

Little Kate came running breathlessly in, at that very evening.

"Mamma! Mamma!" cried the child; "a white lady waving her arms out of the back window! Is it the poor lady who was murdered by the Indians before the house was built? Cook says it was! And cook is going to-morrow, and so is Emma Jane!"

Mrs. Clare stepped out into the fading twilight and herself reconnoitered the ground.

"My dear," said she, "you are mistaken. There is nothing there but the white mist rising out of the river and the hemlock boughs waving in the wind."

"Yes, I know," said little Kate, who was clinging to the skirt of her mother's dress; "but there was a white lady there—white; her hair and her hands and the veil over her head—leaning out of the back window over the dairy."

"I'll stay. It ain't pleasant, I know, to feel as there's supernatural creatures a-glidin' all around and peeping at you through the cracks in the door, but I'm used to it. And my duty! the first thing I think of, ma'am."

"You are a good girl, Mary," said Mrs. Clare, "and, I dare say, I shall get other servants before long."

"I hope so, ma'am," said Mary, dubiously. "But I can't say. Most of them as goes out to service around here has a mortal dread of Ivy Lodge!"

The stable-boy, a bright little fellow, whom Mrs. Clare had brought with her from the city, was the next person to whom the white lady appeared. He, too, left at once, without even waiting for the balance of wages due him.

"What shall I do?" said Mrs. Clare, piteously.

"There's Fern Manor, ma'am, across the river, to let," suggested Mary Moore, with her faded eyelashes cast down. "It's a very nice modern house, ma'am, and—"

"It's out of the question," said Mrs. Clare, "entirely out of the question. The rent of Fern Manor is twice what we pay here."

"But one can have peace and quietness there," said Mary, obsequiously. "I'll have it here," said Mrs. Clare, resolutely. "I'll know the reason why. I'll be conquered by no senseless phantoms, nor yet by the silly stories of vulgar gossips."

"Just as you please, ma'am," said Mary, a little crisply; and she went back to the kitchen to see that the biscuits did not brown too much.

The night closed in wild and windy, with sweeps of rain rattling against the casements and the trees groaning in the blast. Mrs. Clare sat up late, reading and writing to her husband, and the clock struck twelve before she rose to go to her own room.

A violent draught of wind blew out her light as she entered the hall, and, in the sickly gleam of the hanging lantern above she saw a white, spectral figure at the end of the passage—something which seemed to wave its arms and retreat slowly as she advanced.

For a second her blood seemed to stand still in her veins; her head swam. Her first impulse was to fly in terror and cry out for help; her second to make a brave stand.

Springing forward, she clutched at the white shadow. Once, twice it evaded her, but the third time she succeeded in grasping it tightly—something of flesh and blood like herself. Tearing the white, floating drapery away, she revealed the shrinking figure and conscience-stricken face of—Mary Moore!

"So," said she, coolly, "you were the ghost, after all! I had begun to suspect it before this. Now, tell me how long this has been going on, or I will have you locked up in State's prison for the rest of your life!"

And thus exorted, Mary Moore made a full confession of her peccadilloes. It transpired that old Mrs. Hodges, whose maid she was for ten years, had partly promised Ivy Lodge—or the use of it, rather—to her, when she should be married to Isaac Smiley, the young ship-carpenter, and she had anticipated the letting of lodgings; perhaps, even, a house full of summer boarders to eke out their livelihood. But when the real estate agent came to look at it, he declared that it was a great deal too good to be let at that price. And he persuaded Mrs. Hodges to have it repaired and painted and let, ready furnished, for her own personal benefit. Of course, this was a cruel disappointment to Mary Moore and her faint-hearted swain, the carpenter.

"She has played me false, after all these years," said Mary to herself, when her mistress was safe among the Florida orange-groves. "And I'll make it my business to see that she never makes a cent of profit out of all her fine new arrangements. She shall be glad to let me have it!"

So, under a pretext and another, she had contrived to attach herself to the household of every tenant of Ivy Lodge, and, one by one, had succeeded in frightening them away, until Mrs. Clare's spirit and presence of mind had so unexpectedly conquered her treacherous plans.

Mary Moore left Middle Marshes quietly, and at once. And the ghost of Ivy Lodge never appeared again.—Amy Randolph, in N. Y. Ledger.

A Snow-White Swallow.

Ornithologists in Paris are much interested in the discovery of a rare bird in the shape of a snow-white swallow. This novel specimen of the feathered tribe came to life lately in a nest which was built by the parent bird under the eaves of a glass roof covering a court in the extensive manufactory of a tradesman residing in the district of Grenelle. The white bird was born with two black specimens, one of which flew away as soon as it was fledged, whereupon the tradesman, in order to keep the other two, transformed the glass-roofed court into a temporary aviary. Photographs have been taken of the snow-white swallow, and will be sent to the leading naturalists of the city, one of whom went to Grenelle in order to study the feathered curiosity. This gentleman was, however, too late to see the bird alive. It perished probably because too much care was taken of it, or through fright at the number of people who came to stare at it as a natural curiosity. The dead bird will now be stuffed and sent to the museum of the Botanical Gardens, where there is already a white magpie, which still lives and hops about among its companions, from which it only differs in color.

Compressed Air Torpedo.

Still another torpedo, this one the invention of an Austrian Count, Buonacorsi by name, has made its appearance in the European naval and military world. According to the official and private reports of the trial of this instrument they were eminently successful, giving results superior even to those obtained from the Whitehead. The motive power is compressed air, acting directly from a reservoir upon the propeller without any assistance or intervention from machinery. The propulsion is effected by twin screws working inversely and giving a velocity greater and more continuous, it is contended, than any obtained in other torpedoes. One remarkable feature of this invention is the faculty of automatic guidance, which enables it to avoid protective nets and shields, and to give a distance before rising to give its blow.

Which is the fairest, a rose or a lily? Which is the sweetest, a peach or a pear? Merry's coquettish, and charming is Milly; Dora is gentle and fair. Sweet as a flower was her face when I kissed her. Love is the romance and glory of life. Milly, my playmate, I love 'like a sister.' But Dora I choose for my wife.

That's right, young man, marry the girl you love, by all means. If she'll have you, should her health become delicate and her beauty fade after marriage, remember that this is due to functional weakness, irregularities, or painful disorders peculiar to her sex, in the cure of which Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money refunded. For overworked, worn-out, run-down, debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, shop-girls, housekeepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequalled as an appetizing codifier and restorative tonic, or strength-giver.

THE SPECTRAL VISITOR.

Mrs. Clare Gets the Better of a Designing Female.

"If you could give her any employment, Mrs. Clare, it would be a real act of Christian charity," said good old Mr. Owens.

Mrs. Clare looked doubtful. She had come down into the country, with her heart full of peace and good-will toward men—and women, into the bargain. She had not much money to give—she had come to Middle Marshes to economize. That was the secret of her taking the lonely cottage on the edge of the hemlock copse, where the wind sighed so funnily of an evening, and the red reflections of the spring sunsets seemed to turn the low-lying pools to blood. She was the wife of a sea captain, whose biennial voyages to China and Japan seemed like lifetimes; and she had a small income, and four little children to bring up. But work—that was, perhaps, within her power to bestow; and yet she hesitated, as Mr. Owens spoke.

"But she is such a peculiar looking person," said Mrs. Clare. "Do you notice she never lifts her eyes to one's face? And such strange eyes, too—all of greenish lights, like a cat's. And then, her hair is so colorless and dry, exactly like the faded grass along the edge of the marsh; and there is such a peculiar, disfiguring scar upon her cheek."

Mr. Owens laughed a fat, oily, comfortable laugh.

"But my dear madam," said he, "how very illogical that is. After all, we are none of us reasonable for our looks. And they tell me she is an excellent seamstress. And, more than this, she has had a disappointment."

"A disappointment!" said Mrs. Clare. "You wouldn't think it, would you?" said Mr. Owens.

"Yes; she was engaged to a young carpenter of the neighborhood. But work was slack, and the carpenter didn't see his way clear to matrimony. So he has gone to the next seaport town to work at ship-building, and Mary Moore is left to wear the willow."

"Poor thing!" said Mrs. Clare; and she resolved to conquer her prejudices at once. Mary Moore was summoned to Ivy Lodge and set to work, and profuse were her expressions of gratitude.

"I hope you like the cottage, ma'am," said Mary, one day, as she sat at her work in the bay window.

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Clare, earnestly. "You don't find it lonely, eh, ma'am?"

Mrs. Clare shivered slightly. "A little," she acknowledged. "Toward evening, sometimes."

"Ah!" said Mary Moore, biting off her thread. "I thought so. I know all about the house. I lived here, ma'am, ten years, as maid to Mrs. Hodges, as owns the place. She couldn't stand it, ma'am, so she's gone to Florida."

"Couldn't stand what?" asked Mrs. Clare, with some curiosity.

"The sights, ma'am," said Mary, lowering her voice mysteriously. "And the sounds."

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Clare. "Ah, ma'am, that's what a many has said before you," said Mary. "Seven families have lived here since my old mistress went to Florida, and not one of 'em has stayed over the three months. All because of—"

"Of what?" said Mrs. Clare, as the woman paused.

"Of the ghost, ma'am, if you will have it," answered Mary Moore.

Mrs. Clare burst out laughing. "I never heard any thing so ridiculous in all my life," said she. "Do, pray, take a little more pains with those buttonholes, Mary, and let the ghost alone; and I'll wager that it will not trouble us."

Mary sewed away in silence, with the greenish eyes fixed intently on her work, and the thin lips tightly compressed. She had scattered the seed; it was only to wait, now, for it to germinate.

Little Kate came running breathlessly in, at that very evening.

"Mamma! Mamma!" cried the child; "a white lady waving her arms out of the back window! Is it the poor lady who was murdered by the Indians before the house was built? Cook says it was! And Cook is going to-morrow, and so is Emma Jane!"

Mrs. Clare stepped out into the fading twilight and herself reconnoitered the ground.

"I'll stay. It ain't pleasant, I know, to feel as there's supernatural creatures a-giddin' all around and peeping at you through the cracks in the door, but I'm used to it. And my duty! the first thing I think of, ma'am."

"You are a good girl, Mary," said Mrs. Clare, "and, I dare say, I shall get other servants before long."

"I hope so, ma'am," said Mary, dubiously. "But I can't say. Most of them as goes out to service around here has a mortal dread of Ivy Lodge!"

The stable-boy, a bright little fellow, whom Mrs. Clare had brought with her from the city, was the next person to whom the white lady appeared. He, too, left at once, without even waiting for the balance of wages due him.

"What shall I do?" said Mrs. Clare, piteously.

"There's Fern Manor, ma'am, across the river, to let," suggested Mary Moore, with her faded eyelashes cast down. "It's a very nice modern house, ma'am, and—"

"It's out of the question," said Mrs. Clare, "entirely out of the question. The rent of Fern Manor is twice what we pay here."

"But one can have peace and quietness there," said Mary, obsequiously. "And I'll have it here," said Mrs. Clare, resolutely. "or I'll know the reason why. I'll be conquered by no senseless phantasms, nor yet by the silly stories of vulgar gossips."

"Just as you please, ma'am," said Mary, a little crisply; and she went back to the kitchen to see that the biscuits did not brown too much.

The night closed in wild and windy, with sweeps of rain rattling against the casements and the trees groaning in the blast. Mrs. Clare sat up late, reading and writing to her husband, and the clock struck twelve before she rose to go to her own room.

A violent draught of wind blew out her light as she entered the hall, and in the sickly gleam of the hanging lantern above she saw a white, spectral figure at the end of the passage—something which seemed to wave its arms and retreat slowly as she advanced.

For a second her blood seemed to stand still in her veins; her head swam. Her first impulse was to fly in terror and cry out for help; her second to make a brave stand.

Springing forward, she clutched at the white shadow. Once, twice it evaded her, but the third time she succeeded in grasping it tightly—something of flesh and blood like herself. Tearing the white, floating drapery away, she revealed the shrinking figure and conscience-stricken face of—Mary Moore!

"So," said she, coolly, "you were the ghost, after all! I had begun to suspect it before this. Now, tell me how long this has been going on, or I will have you locked up in State's prison for the rest of your life!"

And thus exasperated, Mary Moore made a full confession of her peccadilloes.

It transpired that old Mrs. Hodges, whose maid she was for ten years, had partly promised Ivy Lodge—or the use of it, rather—to her, when she should be married to Isaac Smiley, the young ship-carpenter, and she had anticipated the letting of lodgings; perhaps, even, a house full of summer boarders to eke out their livelihood. But when the real estate agent came to look at it, he declared that it was a great deal too good to be donated after this fashion. And he persuaded Mrs. Hodges to have it repaired and painted and let, ready furnished, for her own personal benefit.

Of course, this was a cruel disappointment to Mary Moore and her faint-hearted swain, the carpenter.

"She has played me false, after all these years," said Mary to herself, when her mistress was safe among the Florida orange-groves, "and I'll make it my business to see that she never makes a cent of profit out of all her fine new arrangements. She shall be glad to let me have it yet."

So, upon one pretext and another, she had contrived to attach herself to the household of every tenant of Ivy Lodge, and, one by one, had succeeded in frightening them away, until Mrs. Clare's spirit and presence of mind had so unexpectedly conquered her treacherous plans.

Mary Moore left Middle Marshes quietly, and at once. And the ghost of Ivy Lodge never appeared again.—Amy Randolph, in N. Y. Ledger.

A Snow-White Swallow.

Ornithologists in Paris are much interested in the discovery of a rare bird in the shape of a snow-white swallow. This novel specimen of the feathered tribe came to life lately in a nest which was built by the parent bird under the eaves of a glass roof covering a court in the extensive manufactory of a tradesman residing in the district of Grenelle.

The white bird was born with two black specimens, one of which flew away as soon as it was fledged, whereupon the tradesman, in order to keep the other two, crammered the glass-roofed court into a temporary aviary. Photographs have been taken of the snow-white swallow and will be sent to the leading naturalists of the city, one of whom went to Grenelle in order to study the feathered curiosity. This gentleman was, however, too late to see the bird alive. It perished probably because too much care was taken of it, or through fright at the number of people who came to stare at it as a natural curiosity. The dead bird will now be stuffed and sent to the museum of the Botanical Gardens, where there is already a white magpie, which still lives and hops about among its companions, from which it only differs in color.

Compressed Air Torpedo.

Still another torpedo, this one the invention of an Austrian Count, Buacconi by name, has made its appearance in the European naval and military world. According to official and private reports of the trial of this instrument they were eminently successful, giving results superior even to those obtained from the Whitehead. The motive power is compressed air, acting directly from a reservoir upon the propeller without any assistance or intervention from machinery. The propulsion is effected by twin screws working inversely and giving a velocity greater, where more continuous, than any obtained in other torpedoes. One remarkable feature of this invention is the faculty of automatic guidance, which enables it to avoid protective nets and shields, and to dive any distance before rising to give its blow.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Which is the fairest, a rose or a lily? Which is the sweetest, a peach or a pear? Merry's coquettish, and charming is Milly; Doris is gentle and fair. Sweet as a flower was her face when I kissed (Love is the romance and glory of life), Milly, my playmate, I love 'like a sister,' But Doris I choose for my wife.

That's right, young man, marry the girl you love, by all means, if she'll have you. Should her health become delicate and her beauty fade after marriage, remember that this is due to functional weaknesses, irregularities, or painful disorders peculiar to her sex.
